There may be some exceptions, bu what are they in comparison with the thousands that live a brief miserable and ill-speat life, and go to their graves unknown and forgotten? There are also exceptions in the higher ranks of life, but it is quite absurd to use them as a counterbalance, or as a means for argument. Opium smoking, when once the habit is conlacted, is regarded by the majority of the poor gnorant classes of China as more indispensable than the usual necessaries of life and is so barm his executors, administrators, and assigns, subject to ful that it causes them to forget the comfort of the several conditions upon which I hold the same at their families, and to lose love and respect for the time of the execution hereof, and I, the said their aged parents; in fact a confirmed hangry. opium smoker would rather have his feed of

Danish subject manuscript the hoped that it will soon; be removed by the wise three hundred manuscript and the removed by the wise three hundred manuscript and the removed by the wise cent, interest on one half [21 0] from the first of November, 1893, and on the other half (£150) from the let of Pebruary, 1894, antil payment is made, including costs of the case.

The amount demanded represents a payment of ten shillings per share on 600 shares in the Bank of China etc., which is valled for in two enms of five skillings each respectively, due on the lat of November, 1893, and the lat of February, 1894, and which defendant has refused

It is confessed between the parties that the Bank which originally was started under the name of the Trust and Loan Company of China. Japan and the Straits. Limited, and later on was altered to the Bank of China, Japan, and the Straits, Limited, has capital consisting of 199,875 subscribed ordinary shares of £10 each and 1,250 founders shares of £1; and on the ordinary shares £1.5s, per share is paid-up. Further, defendant has from time to time since July, 1891, bought and is booked in the Shanghai register of the Bank as owner of 2.000 ordinary shares, for which he in every instance has made and signed a deed of transfer as

He asserts this to be a breach of contract on the part of the Back which discharges him from all responsibilities to same. 4. Finally he asserts that the last yearly account of the Bank dated the 30th of December 1898, is misleading and not correct; owing o this he is of opinion that he has no obligation to further payments (calls). The Court has investigated and considered the various representations of the defendant with the following results :--1-It holds itself to be competent to judge the case after Danish laws and rules. 2 - As no special Danish " Aktic Lovgivning" (law on shares) exists, the case must be ried according to the usual rules for contracts, from which it follows that it we the defendant's own business to make himself acquainted with the laws and statutes of the Bank before he became a shareholder in same his ignorance about these cannot clear him from responsibility.
